Chance to See Good Ball. The Hammond-Knowlton baseball team of Putnam got in preliminary practice on the high school grounds Saturday afternoon. Fifteen men reported for practice and the manager, William Devine, was greatly encour-aged by the material that presented itself for a tryout. It is intended to enclose the old Morse baseball grounds, which have been leased for the season and independent ball will be played with the strongest teams procurable. The quality of the sport will of course depend upon the support given the team. It is not a money making proposition and all the money received will be used to give a better article of ball, so it is up to the fans to say what sort of baseball they want Putnam to have this season and evidence their desire by a substantial patronage of the games. The high school has some excellent material and will with out doubt join the Eastern Connecticut High School league, so that if the support is forthcoming Putnam is to se a revival of the national sport this year that has been dormant for some three or four years past.
